Ink and Remoglue on Paper

ENDURANCE: That is what is required to make it as a person who must - for now - live on the streets. Each day, this man wears some of the clothes he owns and carries the rest around with him in his bag. He stops to pick up some litter, because for the time being this is his home and he chooses to take care of it. He has not lost his dignity – he is just another refugee in his own birth place. Though from the comments that he sometimes hears from those that pass by him, it takes effort to remember that who he is inside is not determined by where he must stay outside.

May we not take for granted the comfort and peace we enjoy, and I hope we can be more sensitive to those in need. Have a fabulous weekend! Thanks!!
